

Where was Giovanni Orto's hometown in Italy?

By Deborah A. Carl

The first place to start was with what did I know?

There were several documents that said he and his wife were born in Italy, and I had a pedigree chart my father created that said he was born in “Monopoli? Or Barrie, Italy.” I thought I had solved the question when I found John Orto's obituary that appeared in the Post Star and Times in Glens Falls, New York. Obituaries are usually written by the family and it said, “He was born in Brindisi, Italy in 1888...”¹ (See Document 1) But then I found an obituary that appeared in the Tampa Bay Times in St. Petersburg, Florida which said, “Born in Bari, Italy.”² (See Document 2) Now I know where Dad got Barrie, and while I didn't know where he got Monopoli, it is between Bari and Brindisi so it was still a possibility.

While going through the hints on Ancestry, I found his World War I Draft Registration Card which said he was born on 30 March 1888 in Monopoli, Italy.³ (See Document 3) Because John would have provided this information, Monopoli was the most logical place to look for his birth record. From his marriage record, again he was most likely the informant, I learned his parents were Victora Orto and Addolorato Nistrìo.⁴ (See Document 4) The information was obviously written by the clerk since the handwriting was the same for all the entries on the page, so I suspected the parents' names were close but not exactly correct. So off I went to Monopoli!

And Giovanni Orto was born in Monopoli, Bari, Italy, on 30 March 1888, “figli di genitori ignati” (the son of unknown parents).⁵ Looking at birth records for 1885-1895 (1890 & 1891 were missing from the available digital images and 1892 didn't have an index and wasn't searched), John was the only Orto leading me to believe he was a foundling and lied about his parents' names.

Finding the hometown of our immigrant ancestors can be challenging, but I got lucky with this one. I was not able to find an obituary for his wife, Civita Forte, but she came to the United States with her parents, and her father's obituary said he was born in Formia, Italy.⁶ Off I went to Formia!

So of course the records for 1888 and 1889 were not available in the digital images so I couldn't search for Civita's birth record, but the records for 1855 were available so I could look for her father. And sure enough, he was born on 17 October 1855 in Mola e Castellone (which in 1863 changed its name to Formia after an ancient town that had been in the area), Latina, Italy.⁷ In the margin of his birth record was a note that on 13 December 1883 in Formia, Latina, Italy, Francesco Forte married Filomena Masiello.⁸
